

Next 'Carry On, Canada' Broadcast Will Feature McGill's War Effort In Relation to Canada's Achievement

Mr. Strange, Program Writer, Here to Collect Script Material

Students' Salvage Work Is Especially Highlighted

McGill's War Effort will supply the material for the next "Carry On, Canada" broadcast on Sunday evening. The salvage aspect is to be emphasized, but the other various drives will have their part also. A choir chosen from the two Glee Clubs will sing, and it may be that some of the dramatic work in the sketches will be done by students.

Mr. Strange, who manages the script of the program, has made the arrangements for the broadcast as the result of a suggestion made to him by Glenn Cowan during the Student Rally; Mr. Strange was here at that time to see Hitler burn, having been invited to give an address to the assembled students. The original idea, a plan for a two-hour program on the war activities of the nation's colleges, came from the University of British Columbia. It has been decided, however, to devote one program to each of the universities, McGill being first chosen.

Information Compiled

Fifteen to twenty minutes of the half-hour will be used to set forth the students' activities. To assure adequate information, each member of the Inner War Council was required last Thursday to undertake the compilation of a comprehensive report on the war work, either accomplished or projected, entered upon by his group.

These reports are now complete, and have been placed in the hands of Mr. Strange, who flew down from Ottawa last night to organize the program. This afternoon he heard the Glee Clubs and agreed that they should have a place on the broadcast, probably for the singing of "Hail, Alma Mater." That students will have acting parts is not yet definitely established.

The script for the broadcast, which Mr. Strange always writes himself a few days before the program goes on the air, will be put together on Thursday from the information collected. The various projects which may receive mention, are the McGill Blood Donors Registration Centre, Research Volunteer Registration, and the Volunteer Reserve.

C. B. Christie Is Elected As Member of Senate

Professor C. B. Christie, Chairman of the Department of Electrical Engineering, has been elected by the Faculty of Engineering as a member of the Senate during the temporary absence of Professor C. Jamieson, who is now on war service.

Professor Jamieson is the director-general of Army Engineering Design in Department of Munitions and Supply. The Professor has been able to spend only a small part of his time at the University because of his pressing duties. Therefore he has had to relinquish membership in the Senate for the duration of the war.

Rainbow Room Disclosed Deep In Plumber's Hall

By L. S.

Since the engineering building has also become the home of the Faculty of Architecture a few girls have braved the gates and are actually legally admitted to superman's realm. And superman seems to be improving; co-eds (and others too) are really invited; yes, believe it or not, to come and see an exhibition put on by the architects in their new studio, of which they are very proud.

Betty co-ed did not trust the engineers and so she went there to see with her own eyes. Step after step, braving superior looks of many an ugly engineer, she made her way through the building. It took her quite a time to find her destination, especially since one kindly hearted superman took special pains to lead her to the other end of the building. Yet superman did not outwit our clever co-ed and she found her way all by herself. On the second floor, right opposite the stairs a cheerful sign greeted her. She entered through a red door into a pleasant newly white washed studio with orange and blue radiators and other pale blue and yellow decorations. Betty right away baptized it the "Rainbow Room."

Betty's guide stressed right away that all the work in that room had been done by the architects alone.

As Betty made the tour of the Arts and Science To Meet Today

Brewery Visit To Be Discussed At Meeting

The Arts and Science Undergraduate Society will hold a special meeting in the Arts Smoking Room today at 5.00 p.m.

The discussion will consist of the business and plans for the future. A new constitution has been prepared which will be ratified at this meeting.

A copy with the proposed changes is posted on the Notice Board in the Arts Building so that students can come to the meeting with a knowledge of the Constitution.

Tom Mulligan, the president, announced that the meeting will be asked to approve a forthcoming visit to a brewery, and stated that it also planned to bring up a proposal to put up a trophy for the annual Arts-Engineers fight.

December 8 Is Date Set For Women's Buffet Supper

The annual Women's Union Buffet Supper will take place on Monday, December 8th at 6.30 p.m. in the R.V.C. Gymnasium. This year the program will consist of several short skits which are to be presented by the various R.V.C. Clubs and Societies. The Women's Science Club, the Modern Dance Club, and the R.V.C. Glee Club will all be active in these demonstrations.

This supper is a yearly get-together of all Women students at McGill, and it is stressed by the committee that all Women students should take this opportunity of getting to know each other. The price of the tickets has been reduced to thirty-five cents and can be bought from all class representatives or from any of the club executives.

Historian Will Address Clubs

R.V.C. & Men's Historical Clubs Sponsor Dinner

Professor O. Odolizlik will address a combined gathering of the McGill Historical Club and the Royal Victoria College Historical Club at a dinner to be held in his honour at the Sherbrooke Cafe in the Sherbrooke Apartments tomorrow evening at 7.30.

The Professor will also give a lecture tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock in Moysse Hall on the topic "Events in Central Europe Since 1918." Dr. F. Cyril James will be in the chair. Although the lecture is under the auspices of the Department of History, all students of the university will be welcome.

The speaker is an authority on the history of Czechoslovakia. He was a lecturer in history at the Charles University in Prague when, in 1930, he was invited to act as lecturer in the Czechoslovakian Language and Literature in the School of Slavonic Studies at King's College in the University of London.

Professor Odolizlik was later appointed Extraordinary Professor in Czechoslovakian History at Charles University. He held this position until the German invasion. The Professor thereupon came to the United States, where for the past year he has been lecturing on Central European History at Columbia University. Following the dinner, Professor Odolizlik will leave for Queen's and Toronto Universities where he has been invited.

Cosmos Hear Dr. Waelbroeck

Luncheon Will Also Be Held Tomorrow In Grill Room

A meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club will be held at Strathcona Hall, on Thursday, at 8.30 p.m. A feature of the meeting will be an address by Dr. Waelbroeck, chief of the Employment and Migrations section of the I.L.O. The topic of the address will be "The International Labour Conference, 1941."

The Doctor has recently arrived in Montreal from the conference, which was held at New York.

Dr. Waelbroeck was born and educated in Belgium, and he received the degree of Doctor in Law from the University of Ghent. He served with the Belgian Army, and was wounded during World War I. After serving the Belgian government for a time, he went to join the London staff of the League of Nations, where he became connected with the International Labour Office.

The program for the evening includes refreshments and dancing.

Chess Club to Feature Blindfold Chess Games

The main feature, of the meeting of the Chess club which is being held tonight in the Union Reading Room at 8.00 p.m., will be the simultaneous playing of several regular and blindfold chess games. At this meeting members will be informed of the draw for the first round of the tournament. All who as yet have not registered for the tournament are urged to do so before 5.00 p.m. this afternoon.

All who expect to come to the meeting are asked, due to the shortage of equipment, to bring their own sets and boards with them to the meeting. The tournament, until the quarter final is reached, will be on a knock-out basis after which it will take the form of a round robin.

Grad School Registration Shows Decrease of 32

This year's School of Graduate Studies has a total of 206 members—154 men and 52 women. In comparison last year's statistics show 30 more men and 2 more women—a total of 32.

Since registration is not complete until February, however, it is expected that the figures will be equalled by next term. This shows that although world conditions are comparatively graver, this has had no bearing on registration in that faculty.

The reason advanced for this is that specialized study remains as high as ever, especially in chemistry; thus preparing for government work. Many, having taken this post-graduate course, are now working with the staff on war research problems.

McGill, N.Y.U. to Debate U.S. Declaration of War

McGill Supports Affirmative of Resolution

"Resolved, that the United States should immediately declare war against Germany," is the subject to be debated tomorrow night by McGill and New York University. The debate will take place in R.V.C. at 8.45 p.m. The McGill team will uphold the affirmative and the N.Y.U. team will defend the negative side of the resolution.

Representing McGill will be Alex Stalker, retired president of the Debating Union Society, and Donald Delvin, secretary of the Political Economy Club. The N.Y.U. team consists of Stanley Marshall, who apart from being captain of the Varsity Debating team is also editor of the John Marshall Law Review and member of the undergraduate scholarship committee, and Arthur Immerman, manager of the Varsity Debating team and secretary of the Gavel Club. There will be three judges to decide the outcome.

S.C.M. Groups Announce Plans

Williams Gives Fireside Talk At Sunday Tea

The Executive of the S.C.M. announces that there will be a meeting of the World Mission of the Christian Church Group, at one p.m. today, and also of the Open House Committee.

On Thursday, the Executive will be holding a meeting, at one p.m. and at six o'clock that evening, the Philosophers Study Group will come together. The "Christian as Citizen Group" will convene on Friday at one o'clock.

On Sunday, a Fireside gathering is scheduled at Marion Frances' house, 1620 Cedar Avenue, apt. 11, at 3.30 p.m. Professor Williams will speak on a "Scientist's view of Religion." Hematotherapy and Personality Discussed in Medical Journal

In the October issue of the quarterly McGill Medical Journal are articles understandable by both the technically experienced and the layman. This journal is edited by medical students with James A. F. Stevenson as Editor-in-Chief.

O. F. Denstedt's article entitled "Preservation of Blood" should be of special interest at present because of the recent campaign for student blood donors.

There follows a discussion of "The Patient and his Personality" by M. R. Harrower-Erickson. This deals with the Rorschach method of personality evaluation and its uses in clinical medicine. Mr. Harrower-Erickson treats his subject in an interesting manner.

Dr. Crampton Is Named Head of New Department

An announcement has been made of the promotion of Dr. E. W. Crampton from the position of associate professor, to professor of Animal Nutrition here at McGill. Dr. Crampton has been chairman of the graduate society of nutrition since its creation in July of this year.

Principal F. Cyril James has said: "This new department is of particular interest for several reasons. In the first place the problems of human and animal nutrition are recognized at the present time to be of great importance in regard to maintenance of physical well-being. The war has emphasized this fact."

Within its framework this new department embraces Macdonald College as well as McGill, and so facilities for both laboratory and practical testing are provided.

Arts and Science To Hold Debates

First of Series To Take Place Early Next Week

It has been announced that the topic for the forthcoming Arts and Science debate, to take place early next week, will be, "Resolved: that social activities at McGill should be curtailed as a means toward greater contribution to the war effort."

All Arts and Science students are eligible, and it is not necessary to have had previous experience, as the main purpose of this particular debate has been announced as providing experience in this field. A list, on which contestants are to sign their name, will be posted on the Arts notice board.

The immediate purpose of the debate is to discover the two best debaters in each class, and the best team in the faculty. The reward will be the Arts Shield.

This is the first of a series of such activities to be held during the year. It is expected to consist of formal class and faculty debates, panel discussions, bull sessions, mock trials, mock Parliaments, and possibly some experimental types of debates now being developed.

Over One Hundred Nominations Received, as Four Students Are Elected by Acclamation

Biographies Deadline for Annual Is This Saturday

Saturday Nov. 29th has been set as the deadline for the biographies of graduating students for "Old McGill 1942." It is essential that all biographies be in the hands of the Biography Editor by the deadline in order that they may be set up in type and adequately proof-read before the Annual goes to press.

All class representatives have been appointed for a month or so now, and the biography forms have been distributed thoroughly in all but a few cases. The Biography Editor stated last night that in these cases, which have resulted chiefly from incomplete registration, the persons concerned should immediately contact their representative or some member of the annual board.

Culliton Flays Economic Law

Considers It Responsible for Mess in '30's

"Too long have we worshipped things called 'the laws of economics.' That has been the trouble with economics, the study of economics, and with economists." So stated Professor John Culliton of the Economics Department, speaking yesterday at the first Commerce luncheon of the year.

As students of the Commerce Faculty relaxed and smoked cigars after the meal, Professor Culliton attacked the notion that Canada's new Price Control Plan is doomed to failure because it is "contrary to all the principles of economics." These principles of economics were responsible for the "awful mess in which the world found itself in the '30's" he asserted. Too long have we enshrined them and been mesmerized by them.

Professor Culliton stressed the point that we must now harness these laws and use them to our own particular advantage. He then went on to defend the Price Control Plan on the grounds that it represented the harnessing of the most fundamental of all the laws of economics—that man is activated by self-interest.

The Price Control Plan is definitely contrary to the laws of economics, he said, yet it will work because people will now pay no more than they paid before and producers will be duty-bound to produce as they had produced previously. Consumer interest has been placed above producer interest.

M.R.T.B. Asked To Donate Blood

Medicos First McGill Students To Be Called

McGill's first blood donors will give their blood this Thursday at the Red Cross Clinic on Bishop street. Four final year medical students have been chosen to begin this phase of McGill's War Effort. They are Charles Pick, Fred Davies, Stewart Reid, and Herb Owen.

Canvassing of the M.R.T.B. for blood shall begin tomorrow, and will continue daily. Blood donors shall be exempt from the parade subsequent to the time of their blood donation.

The Blood Donors' Clinic is going full blast every Monday and Thursday now, with almost 150 donations each day. Of these, about six or eight will be McGill students. All donors are notified by the Red Cross several days in advance of the Monday or Thursday they are to be asked.

Philatelists Hold Chinese Auction For War Fund

Mint Stamps of Victoria's Reign Will Be Sold

By P. R. C. V. H.

A Chinese Auction, which is to be the latest novelty introduced to McGill for the furtherance of the war effort, will be held in the Union music room on Friday next. The material to be auctioned by this peculiar system will be several rare stamps, worth several dollars apiece, which have been given amongst the four thousand already handed over to the Philatelic and Numismatic Society to be sold for the benefit of the war fund.

Now, a word to the ignorant: a Chinese Auction is a system whereby a collector can buy a valuable stamp for only a few cents, although the auctioneer still receives the value of the stamp, or possibly even more. Sounds screwy doesn't it? All commerce students are advised to come to this, as they may learn something that they will not learn in their lectures.

Anyway, here is how it works. A stamp, of exceptional beauty and rarity (plug) is put up for auction and at the same time an egg-timer is started off behind a screen at the auctioneer's elbow. Next someone in the audience makes a bid for the stamp (not more than a (Continued on Page Four)

Public Speaking Lectures Planned

Debaters Hear McGill Graduate Tuesday Evening

The Debating Union has just announced that it will hold a course of lectures on Public Speaking. The first of these talks will be given on Tuesday, December 2, at eight p.m., but it has not yet been decided where they take place.

Mr. Edmund Collard, B.C.L., a graduate of this University, will be the speaker. His subject, "Psychology of Public-Speaking," ought to be of interest to most students in any way interested in this form of Artistic expression.

Mr. Collard was well known in his days at McGill for his good speeches, and has the reputation of being one of the best debaters to have set foot in McGill. It is emphasized that there are few such good chances to learn about the "tricks of the trade" in debating, for which reason there should be a big turn-out.

Unsolved Problem

In the latest issue of the McGill Medical Journal appears an editorial on Military Training. The Editors of the Journal, in their editorial, disapprove of the university student training plan as applying particularly to medical students:

"The announcement that medical students at McGill would be required to take basic military training came as a painful surprise to most of the School. The experience of the first two years last session had made it evident that such a program would only interfere with vital medical studies while serving no useful purpose in itself. The faculty are fully aware of the effect of the extraneous activity upon the proficiency of their students for they read the examination papers. Military personnel are agreed that these haphazard hours spent during the year are not at all equal in value to the equivalent period spent in continuous training.

"There can be no question of the students attempting to evade their duty. Medical ethics have always placed the duty of the citizen before that of the physician but when his duties as a citizen demand that a doctor practice his profession it is his obligation to his country to do this as efficiently as possible. Medical students are apprehensive that the coming interference with their studies will make this impossible. They are eager to finish their studies and internships that they may join the various medical corps. They have made repeated offers to continue their studies through vacations in order that they may be ready the sooner.

"Some have considered the views of the students on this question of little weight because they are the views of students. It is impossible to correlate such an opinion with the fact that these men are to be offered to the country as fully qualified doctors in the near future. Both the University and government should join in encouraging this group of eager young Canadians in the serious preparation for their vital duties upon which many lives will depend in the near future."

The considerations set forth above do not concern medical students alone, but almost every undergraduate enrolled in the University. If anything is to be done, the action taken will necessarily affect us all. The Editors of the Journal, in their editorial, have stated the facts of their case and presented a problem—but they leave it still unsolved....

The willingness of students to serve, and their appreciation of the need, is common to all faculties of the University. To a greater or less degree, the problem of conflicts and interference again is common to all faculties....

And it has been amply demonstrated and set forth that, not only is military training declared necessary for all those in or near the battle lines, but that it would be sheer folly for any such person not to learn the art of war... Crete, for example. Canada is preparing for any eventuality, and training is part of that preparation; but it happens that the training of students and also the training of soldiers has been declared of great importance.

The present system of military training evades the issue involved. It is true that we are privileged in being able to continue our studies while preparing to serve in the armed forces. But privilege or no privilege, we are doing neither job efficiently. The danger lies in that we are liable to become poorly prepared soldiers and ill-trained students.

The government must decide the question—it is not for the students nor for the university to decide. The individual cases must here be considered; who can serve and who is unable, who are most needed and who are not, who shall go to the battle lines and who shall remain on the home front. This problem faces all Canadians in a greater or less degree—in particular, they are a problem important to university students.

The government must decide the question—will maximum efficiency and preparation be attained through the present system, or will these ends be attained through a Selective Service Program? We feel that the former has proven unsatisfactory, and that the latter should be adopted.

To Speak of Many Things

By ELIE ABEL

New York, November 25—Groucho Marx sat enthroned in the massive grandfather chair from which Joseph Pulitzer used to steer the affairs of his World. Coyle he tucked one leg under him and with fervor talked of a consuming passion, recently kindled in his soul. "You know," he began in a well-modulated voice, "I had been to Gilbert and Sullivan performances many times and couldn't get hot about them. I remember once, going to the Mikado with Alexander Woolcott. I liked the music and especially the lyrics, but I couldn't stand the audiences. They burned with desire to sing along with the cast or at least to whisper the words in chorus. I got up and left. One Mikado was fine, but I couldn't hear it twice at the same time."

Groucho's Apprenticeship.
"Then one day, I bought a Capehart and some D'Oyley Carte recordings. I listened alone—no one else in the house would listen except the Finnish maid, and she was Finnish. As I listened I became enraptured with the music. I took to hearing every performance I could get tickets for. A few weeks ago I came to New York. Since my arrival I haven't missed a show at the Cherry Lane Theatre (in Greenwich Village where a venturesome troupe of G. & S. addicts is doing Iolanthe). If I can interest one of the producers around town I'll do an Iolanthe myself."

Marx the Purist.
Here Groucho, sans grease paint mustache and looking very much the pallid Sardi intellectual grew genuinely compassionate. "Take the Mikado. It's been kicked around so much in the past few years that I shudder at the remembrance. Producers seem to go by the axiom that no Mikado can lose money—that is, except the one in Japan. So we've had an avalanche of Mikados of various hues and tempers. When I do it, I'll do it straight, with just a few deviations. I'll start with Iolanthe and if that goes well I'll do the Mikado and Trial by Jury as well."

As the Lord High Executioner.
In Iolanthe Marx would sing the Lord Chancellor. In the Mikado he'd like to do Ko-Ko—a role which he considers a comic natural. Strangely, it was not difficult to see this new Groucho Marx, immaculate and a master of the well-turned phrase, in sleek pigtail, bandying the patterned comedy of Gilbert as facetiously as he tossed off the utter surrealism of his Marx Brothers stuff with Harpo and Chico.

La Commedia E Finita.
There were more plans on his mind, largely nebulous. He was to do a play in collaboration with the Hollywood screen writer Norman Krasna. They'd give it a trial run in summer stock next season and if it didn't measure up to Broadway standards they might stick a movie producer with it. One thing was clear. Groucho was sick and tired of playing Groucho. And as for his grease paint whiskers, he was through with that "comic Frankenstein" for all time.

The Idol Intact.
He had an itch to do a musical show set in contemporary America, a takeoff on Gilbert and Sullivan. If he could get Morrie Ryskind and George Kaufman together on it... At the back of the room Ryskind who had been listening intently suddenly developed an interest in the lacing of his shoes. Groucho had but one qualification to make. The play would have to skirt political matters—politics are so ephemeral, you know. It must strike the happy proportion between comedy and serious theatre. Too bad that Chaplin should have lost his fine gauge of that proportion in The Great Dictator....

Groucho kept talking, taking the play away from his interviewers. Suddenly he blurted: "Say, don't I get a hearty meal out of this, or even a haircut?"

There was a sigh of relief from a dozen hearts. We knew now that Groucho wasn't dead after all. The Groucho of riotous Saturday afternoons in the neighborhood movie house, of Animal Crackers and A Night at the Opera—that Groucho was here before us—and we had almost been deceived by his slick talk.

The Dialectwister

Symphony Music.

An all-Bohemian program devoted to music by Smetana and Dvorak, with Dr. Artur Rodzinski as conductor and First Cellist Joseph Schuster as soloist, is to be played by the New York Philharmonic Symphony next Sunday afternoon (CKAK 4.00 p.m.) Schuster plays the B minor Concerto for Cello and Orchestra by Dvorak. Rodzinski directs the Overture to "The Bartered Bride" by Smetana, and the first New York concert performance of Bohemian Dance Suite, an orchestral arrangement by Byrnes of pieces originally written for piano by Smetana.

One of the greatest living cellists will be heard next Tuesday evening (CBM 9.30 p.m.), when Emanuel Feuermann makes an appearance as guest soloist with the orchestra of Les Concerts Symphoniques under Desire Defauw. The concert will open with Mr. Feuermann playing Tschalkowsky's "Variations on a Roccoco Theme," a characteristic composition of the great Russian master, which has seldom been heard on the air in Canada. Mr. Feuermann's second number will be "Scherzino" (Solomon), written by Ernest Bloch in 1918. For the concluding number on the program, Desire Defauw will conduct the orchestra in "The Corned Hat," a ballet written by the Spanish composer, de Falla, for Diaghilev when the latter visited Spain in 1917.

Along the Air Waves.

Mysterious disappearance of two men, last reported seen near a graveyard, starts a fast-moving "Big Town" drama starring Edward G. Robinson tonight (CKAK 8.00 p.m.).... The Army-Navy football game, expected to be a Donnybrook all the way, is broadcast over Station CFCF on Saturday afternoon at 2.15 p.m. Always a major attraction on the country's late-season football schedule, this year's battle between the service elevens is beyond dispute the No. 1 college game listed for November's final Saturday.... The Metropolitan Opera will return to the air waves next Saturday afternoon at 3.00 p.m. (CBM) with a broadcast performance of "La Traviata" direct from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera. The Verdi opera, absent from the Metropolitan repertoire for a year, will star Jarmila Novotna, glamorous Czech soprano who has been acclaimed as one of today's foremost singing actresses, in the role of Violetta; Lawrence Tibbett, leading American baritone as Germont. Jan Peerce, American tenor who has been singing for many years over the air, will make his Metropolitan debut as Alfredo. Genaro Papi will conduct.

Tribute to a Genius.

Friday, Dec. 5 is the 150th anniversary of the death of the great musical genius Mozart, described by a biographer as "a wholly superior man, intensely serious, deeply compassionate, almost all-comprehending, with a profound understanding of life...."

The CBC plans to mark this anniversary with two special broadcasts. The first, a fantasy by Gerald Noxon incorporating incidents from the composer's life and well-known examples of his music, will be heard on Friday, Dec. 5 at 5.15 p.m. over Station CBM.

From 9 to 10 p.m. on the same evening, Sir Ernest MacMillan will conduct the Toronto Conservatory Choir, with soloists and an orchestra composed of members of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in Mozart's "Requiem in D Minor." The Requiem, written in 1791, was the composer's last work. The story goes that on Dec. 4, 1791, the composer called for the newly-completed score to be brought to his bed and that, taking the alto part, he sang the music with three friends until they reached "Lacrimosa," when Mozart burst into tears and could go no further. —I.A.S.

BY YEHUDY

Things were getting tougher and tougher. Work was piling up by the tons, and there never seemed to be a free moment for snoozing, snooping, smooching, and other similar exercises. Yehudy was downright bored with the routine. Four years of college were three and a half (the last half) too many. Enough was enough.

Our ingenious scribe, therefore, decided to beget an image of himself—now don't get the wrong idea—to substitute him in all functions involving work. Determined that Frankenstein had nothing on him—scientifically speaking—he set about creating his image.

Recipe consisted of some six text books, wrapped in back issues of the DAILY and soaked in printer's ink. As the creation was to resemble the creator, Yehudy cut a respectable chunk off his proper carcass, from where it seemed to be of least use, only when he tried to sit down afterwards, he had difficulty in keeping an upright posture. On a dark, stormy night, our literary scientist sneaked into the catacombs of the Plumbers' Building, and there, amidst secret formulae and just odors of electrical currents, he breathed life into his artifact. Too bad he had hallucinations!

The creation stood up and faced its creator. It was the spitting image of him. "Hi, Pops!" quoth it.

"Howdy, squirt?" greeted the gratified grouch. Whereupon he doused the youngster in one of the proverbial forty barrels and announced:

"From now on ye shall pass as Yehudy Yuniur."

"OK, Pops."

Here Yehudy deemed it necessary to get things straight with his offspring. "Listen, Yuniur. You were made for a specific purpose—to replace me in all unimportant undertakings, in order that I may be free to devote my talents to more deserving tasks. Therefore, your chief occupation will be to take over my college work. I expect great things of you, son, and make sure to bring in a B.A. for me next May, if you know what's healthy for you."

"It's a cinch, Pops."

"That's what you think," meditated the great scribe.

Thereupon he patted Yuniur paternally on the back, put a thick volume of Kant under the arm of his eye's apple, yawned, and went off to bed for the next month or two.

He woke to the most gargantuan shoves he had ever experienced. Opening his eyes, he faced a broad mouthful of teeth.

"Hello, son. Is the war over?"

"No, Pops, not yet."

"Then why on earth did you wake me? What year is it?"

"Still 1941, only you'll have to tear about fifty pages off your calendar."

"O.K., son. What the hell are you grinning about?"

"Nothing, Pops, it's just that I like you so much."

Sniff, sniff. Rat!

"Alright, Yuniur. Let's have it."

"Well, it's this way: I did a lot of work while you dozed off, only the profs don't seem to like me. I flunked seven papers and two tests."

"What?"

Yuniur's jaw knocked against his knees.

"Aw, it's nothing, Pops," he gulped. "I'll make up for it easy. The finals are a long way off yet. Besides, I've invited all my profs to tea Sunday so's I'll get in good with them."

"Listen, son. The only way to make good in this world is through hard, honest labor and perseverance. Your father has learned at least that much in his land and illustrious academic career. However, all I want from you is a B.A. and I don't give a damn how you get it."

"Right, Pops. It's a cinch."

"O.K. Now scram and let me catch up on my shut-eye."

Some two months later Yehudy suffered an acute attack of insomnia. So he decided to get up for a couple of hours to see his girl friend. He donned his most irresistible attire and galloped off to her abode.

Using his private key, he entered the apartment silently. As soon as he set foot in the living room, there was a piercing creak and his girlfriend faint.

"Yuniur!" exclaimed the dumb-founded pen-pusher. "What the devil are you doing here?"

"Oh... nothing... nothing... just... replacing you... Pops..." stammered a rather startled youngster, creeping out like a wet cat, in deserving mortification, somewhat accelerated by a swift application of boot to seat.

Yehudy administered his profound knowledge of first aid and in no time brought his female back to consciousness.

"How do you feel, honey?" he inquired. And she:

"What... what happened? Oh, darling! You were so doting tonight that for a moment I thought there were two of you..."

There is no need to elaborate on the lecture Yuniur received later that evening regarding the inconveniences to which are submitted all those who are over-affectionate towards their relatives-to-be.

Yehudy hadn't been asleep two weeks after the incident, when he was rudely awakened again by his tender offspring.

"What is it now?" he growled. "A man can't even sleep in peace any more."

"Look, Pops, I got an idea."

"Yeah, that's what I was afraid of. Shoot."

"Don't you think it would be swell for me to write your column for you?"

Requiescat in pace—Yuniur.

COLLEGE POSSESSES UNEQUALLED COLLECTION OF MOVIE SCRIPTS

Through the co-operation of Mr. Walter Wanger and the Hays' Office, Dartmouth College is now the possessor of a movie-script library which is unequalled by any other in the world. Housed on the south balcony of the Sanborn House Library, there is a collection of over 750 original movie scripts.

A comparatively new innovation in the educational curriculum at Dartmouth, the Script Library was first conceived in the winter of 1936-37 by Producer Walter Wanger, who graduated from Dartmouth

Editor, McGill Daily.
Dear Sir:

I should like to thank all those who nominated me to represent the School of Commerce on the Students' Council next year. I shall endeavor to fill the position to the best of my ability.

Yours,
DON DELVIN,
Commerce 3.

In 1915, President Hopkins was at that time visiting Mr. Wanger in Hollywood and referred the idea to Professor Benfield Pressey, who was then the chairman of the English Department. Mr. Wanger's original idea was not for a Script Library but rather for a course in writing for motion pictures, but when Professor Pressey replied that such a course was out of the question because of the lack of adequate scripts from which to instruct, the plan for a library of movie scripts was founded.

At first, Mr. Wanger obtained the scripts by personal solicitation from his contemporaries in Hollywood and sent them to the College. This plan turned out inadequate because of the large number of first-class scripts which were difficult to obtain and which, when the Library finally did get a hold of, were ancient as far as contemporary reading and study were concerned.

Hays Office Sends Scripts
An arrangement was finally made with the Hays Office of Censorship whereby the original of the film scripts would be sent to Dartmouth long before the actual release of the picture. This is made possible through the fact that each motion picture studio is required to send two copies of its original script to the Hays' Office. The Hays' Office invariably makes corrections of some sort, either because of the obscenity or implication, in the script. The College then receives the scripts marked and with suggestions for corrections, a fact which is further valuable to a discerning study of the scripts.

In order to protect the film studios from the copying of either scenes or plots, the College has an agreement with the legal departments of the various studios providing that the former will not use the scripts to produce supposedly original screen stories.

The nearest competition which with the Hays' Office of Censorship of a script library is the Library of The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood. Containing at present about 250 scripts, this library was founded after the Dartmouth Script Library. It is perhaps superior to the Dartmouth Library in the fact that it contains more scripts of the silent films.

Sports Managers Meet— Hockey Starts December 1

Assault-at-Arms, Swimming Meet And Intercompany Rifle League Discussed

In a meeting of the company sports managers yesterday, Mr. Hay Finlay announced that the Intercompany Hockey schedule had been drawn up, and that games were to be played on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday. The games will be so arranged that no team will play on two consecutive Mondays, Wednesdays or Fridays. By this new method, those whose studies interfere on certain days will be able to play. The season opens on December 1, when the Infantry tangles with the Air Force.

There is a scarcity of referees, but the athletic office has decided to pay any one interested in this, the magnificent sum of 50 cents a game. The managers have not yet been appointed, but this is to be left to the coaches.

ASSAULT DATE SET

The date of the annual B. W. and F. Assault-at-Arms was also set for December 15 to 17. This event is open to novices only, anyone who has won an Intercompany, or any City championship being excluded. Condition is very necessary, especially in the two former events. Many men turned out for more than one event in pretty poor condition last year, and they hit the canvas in short order.

It was also announced at the meeting that there would be a swimming meet on December 11. This is to be scored on an individual basis, and will include the usual events. A diving competition will be held on separate days. A water polo league is also in the process of being formed. Since there are not enough players to form a company league, teams will be formed on an individual scoring basis, and the Air Force intends to put up a team.

INTERCOMPANY SHOOTING

Since many of the students have shown a keen interest in a shooting league, the council has decided to form an Intercompany Rifle League. This will not get under way until the Spring for teams are to be chosen on a basis of the individual's military record. The M.R.T.B. has expressed itself as being well pleased with the arrangement and will do everything required to promote it when the time comes.

Since the point participation standings have been disarranged by the passing of B company, and since the task of distributing this company's points has assumed the proportions of a W.P.A. project, it was decided that only the individual scores would be counted, company games being stricken from the record.

News was received last night that Chris Mamen, star McGill skier for a period of five years, is at present in a Kirkland Lake hospital, suffering from a broken back. This injury was sustained in an automobile accident, and although he may be in the hospital for about five months, he is expected to recover fully.

Badminton On Thursday

Fans May Also Play on Saturday

The mixed badminton has been changed from Saturday night to Thursday night, and nine courts will be available. But those who have formed the habit of playing badminton on Saturday night may continue to do so, as three courts will be available every Saturday and Monday night.

The big night, which is Thursday, starts tomorrow night from 7 p.m. until 10.30 p.m. in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gym. Mixed badminton on Thursday nights last year proved to be very popular, and it is expected to be just as popular this year. As far as the informal party, which was held last Saturday night, is concerned, it was a great success and everyone enjoyed themselves. There will be another party in the near future.

SECTION ROUND ROBIN

In the section badminton tournament each section will complete a Round Robin. Each match will consist of three games, one doubles, two singles. The games will be played tomorrow night and the next two Thursdays, as it is expected that the matches will be completed by that time. The possible total points for a section is 24. No girl may play in more than one position during the same night. The games

Outing Club Opens Season

Meeting To Be Held Tomorrow

Moving pictures on skiing, and dancing downstairs in the Grill Room, will be the main items to be offered on the program tomorrow night when the McGill Outing Club opens a new season with its first meeting at 8.00 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

The graduation of most of last year's members has left many vacancies in the ranks, and any enthusiast at the sport is asked to present himself at the meeting. There are many from among the freshmen who should prove valuable additions to the club. Such chaps as Rolf Olson who is an up and coming star at the sport, should be an asset. Old trustees such as the Riddell brothers along with the new members will help to make this coming season a successful one.

Stress is to be laid on the fact that there will be ample opportunities for competitive skiing.

After the business of the evening, the manager of competitive skiing will set the time of a meeting to be held at some future date.

Football Tycoons Meet Tomorrow at the Union

Banquet to Be Fitting End Of Season

Tomorrow night's banquet should be a fitting climax to a successful football season. Anyone who played on one of the teams may come to this last kick-off of the season for the purely nominal fee of 75 cents. There will be no bewildering plays as the game is scheduled to start with a swift entree down an empty field, to be followed immediately with a forward pass to either one of the turkey wings. It has been pointed out that there has been no general workout since some time last week and that the players will be somewhat out of training. Because of this the water boys have been ordered to remain on the scene throughout the game.

Only three teams out of the four who were in the league will be at the banquet. Unfortunately the Macdonald College team could not make arrangements to attend, and so only the teams from McGill will be present. Among the speakers of the evening will be Dr. Fred J. Tees, the honorary president of the football club, who will speak to players and coaches. A great deal of the evening's festivities will be centered around the coaches who contributed a great deal to a successful season. There will be several other guests, men associated with the football world and men who worked hard in drawing up an interesting schedule.

Army, having emerged winner from the tussle and also having gone through the season without losing a game, will naturally be recipient of a great deal of the honors to be conferred at the proceedings. However, that does not mean that the rest of the teams will be forgotten, for every player is deserving of credit and surely this credit will be accorded to them.

It can be said in passing that Tommy Chown, the Athletic Manager, went through a great deal of trouble to acquire a beer licence for the evening, and to quote his (Continued on Page Four)

Engineers Triumph in Net Opener

E Company Downs Teams from C and G

In the opening of the basketball schedule at 5.15 yesterday, two games of the four scheduled were played. Due to a mistake in the schedule, the game between C1 and G2 was postponed, but there will be no loss of points. However, since Flight F was unable to put up five men, Ind. 2 won by default.

Of the games played, the Engineers of E company took all the honors. E4 downed C3 by the score of 36-6 while E2 held up their end by taking their opponents to the tune of 19-7. The Ind. 2, who turned out in force, played an exhibition game with some of the players, and they won 28-16.

WILSON STARS

The first game saw a very strong, but numerically weak aggregate, play their opponents into the floor. Wilson was by far the best scorer, taking about half of his teams points. The other four played hard too, Leonards taking second place in the scoring.

The second game, between E2 and G3 was better matched, but still the engineers showed that dogged persistence and, in a final bid for victory, came out with top honors. Rex Ford proved to be the out- (Continued on Page Four)

Novice Skiers Learn Indoors

Fred Urquhart To Give Instruction

This year, both beginners and non-expert skiers will have an excellent opportunity to gain some indoor knowledge of the art of skiing. The plan is to give three lessons on the fundamentals in the B.W. and F. room Mondays, from 5.15 to 6.15 p.m.

Mr. Fred Urquhart will be the skiing instructor and Mr. Van Wagner will plan the schedule for the year. Last year this plan was tried out, but only in the early spring when a lack of snow greatly affected its success. The three hours of indoor instruction will deal mainly with the fundamentals of skiing. The way to hold the body and keep balanced while doing a simple "Christie," how to climb a hill, how to bend while speeding downhill, will be some of the topics touched upon during these sessions.

LESSONS VALUABLE

When the snow sets in, the club will go up to the mountain and put into practice what it has learned from its indoor lessons. These should prove very valuable, since a beginner usually shuns the advice given by experts. They are content to struggle along, repeating mistakes, knowing that they are doing wrong, but insisting on learning the hard way.

Mr. Van Wagner, who is a ski enthusiast, has pointed out that these lessons will prove to be a great asset to any beginner since they will show where the biggest source of error lies. Remedies to these faults will also be given and the skier will then be in a condition to take the sport seriously.

This means, that there will be an ample amount of liquid refreshment, and seeing that the season is over the boys can really let loose and forget all about training rules.

room she inspected the pictures which were hung up on all the walls. There were watercolor sketches as well as pen and ink drawings. In the former she was especially attracted by those of Barbara Ferguson, Sheila Ballie, and Martin Collins and in the latter those of Tony Lewis and Sid Lithwick interested her most.

On the lighter side Betty found much amusement in a realistic steel-man (which, of course, she only recognized when told so.) It served as a lamp-holder. Kay Chard who specializes in such work also can produce with some coil wire and some paper anything from a hula-dancer to a football hero. Another thing which attracted Betty co-ed's attention was a collection of excellent photographs, by an engineer, Jim Collins. By one picture was especially puzzled and when she timidly asked what it was supposed to be, she got the little enlightening answer, that the photographer did not know himself.

Yet Betty's curiosity would not let her leave the room without inquiring about the tree that was planted in the middle of the exhibition, (she wondered whether it was also to be considered as a masterpiece.) Whereupon her guide told among spells of laughter the story of how some engineer returned from the mountain with that specimen and intended to call it back to life in the architect's sanctum.

At the end of her visit Betty was invited to sign their visitor's book and then under the architect's protection she left the hallowed hall of the engineering building.

nickle or so if he is wise) and the auction is started. From here on things do not proceed as usual. The man who makes the first bid has to pay the sum he has bid, although in all probability he does not get the stamp yet. Then, as the other bids follow, each bidder has to pay the difference between his bid and the previous one offered. Then, when the bidding stops, or when the egg timer has finished its run, whichever happens first the last bidder gets the stamp for the difference between his bid and the offer before his, usually only a matter of a few cents.

For those who do not like this system of giving money away to the war council, there will be several lots sold in the ordinary old-fashioned manner as well, and after the auction time will be allowed for members to trade stamps among themselves.

Among the stamps offered for sale will be a collection of mint Queen Victoria issues, from the African Colonies and from the West Indies, donated by the president of the club, and a number of other unusual varieties from all parts of the world.

Culliton Plays Economic Law

sert, is not only logical but just. All our planning for this war and for the post-war period should be governed in similar manner by justice, he declared.

Referring briefly to the post-war period, Professor Culliton ended by saying "The word reconstruction" as used in the phrase "post-war reconstruction" is most misleading. Reconstruction will not be the post war problem. We are not going to inherit an old worn-out plow-horse, but a mighty machine, whose very capacity may be our undoing. It may swallow us up."

Dick Stevenson, President of the Commerce Undergraduate Society, was in the chair and introduced the speaker. Also present at the head table was Dr. Beach, head of the School of Commerce.

Historian Will Address Clubs

With his admirable command of English and his sound knowledge of his subject, a lecture of great interest and of special timeliness in the present crisis in European events may be expected from Professor Odolizlik, according to a member of the McGill Department of History, for what he has to say on Central Europe during the past twenty years is not merely history to him, but is also part of his own personal experience.

Hematotherapy and Personality Discussed in Medical Journal

sued by the McGill Students. Both in literary expression and in formal content it surpasses all but a very few of McGill's efforts in this field. The contributing students did extensive research work in their particular realms of study and the confident and clear tone of the articles is indicative of this.

Further than its absolute merits, the Journal is interesting and worth-while in the respect that deals for the most part with very topical subjects. "The Preservation of Blood," "Britain Keeps Fit" and several others are instances in point. In these articles the author deals with his subject against the war-time background, and highlights all those phases of his research which deal directly or indirectly with the war.

This last point was particularly stressed by the professors who commented on the Journal. They were very glad, they said, to see the students paying particular attention to the medical implications of modern warfare, especially in view of the fact that many of these students will be joining the Medical Corps as soon as they graduate.

cide for the winner, one of which is Professor J. P. Day of McGill University. The other two judges will be announced later, since no definite agreement has as yet been reached. The Red Wing Society have agreed to have some of their members act as ushers at the debate. Following the debate the guest debaters from New York will be entertained by the home team.

The executive of the Debating Union Society feels that a hearty welcome should be extended to our guests from the States and that this could best be done by having McGill well represented at the debate. The Debating Union Society also announced that there are a few more intercollegiate debates on this year's debating program, home debates as well as a debating trip.

Registration. If a sizeable number of volunteers in each of these drives could be obtained, it would add to the tangible sum of the effort, and the hope was expressed that more students would enrol their names.

Salvage, as being the most important part of the whole in the consideration of Mr. Strange, will be assigned the largest role. The three salvage drives which McGill has sponsored in the summer, during Freshman Reception Week, and last week will supply a large deal of information, along with the stamp and the silver paper collections being carried out by different organizations.

Mr. Strange, besides addressing the Students' Rally, inaugurated the latter Victory Loan Campaign here in Montreal. He has been long associated with these Sunday programs in the writing and arrangement of the scrips. The broadcasts are designed to show the extent and effect of the Canadian war effort in particular.

VARSITY PLANS TEST AVIATION, AUTO GASOLINE

Further aid to Canada's war effort by the University was announced this week, when Dr. Robert Newton, Acting President, gave details of the erection of a gasoline testing laboratory to be used exclusively for testing motor and aviation gasoline. Construction work is already under way on the two-storey, brick building.

In 1939 the provincial department of trade and industry asked the Alberta Research Council to take charge of its gasoline tests, with the department providing additional staff and equipment required. Analytical surveys of the gasoline on sale in Alberta have been made from time to time since then, the President stated, and the results have been used in drawing up specifications for commercial gasolines.

Altered conditions arising from the war, chief of which has been the establishment by the Dominion oil controller of nation-wide specifications, have made Alberta specifications non-operative at present, Dr. Newton said, but the required testing of motor and aviation gasoline has been increased greatly. Samples are now submitted for test here from flying fields in western Ontario and the four western provinces, but the present accommodation is both unsuitable and inadequate for this work. The new building is designed specifically for this purpose, the President stated.

One engine is now in steady use to determine the octane number of the gasoline. Octane numbers indicate to the motorist whether the gasoline will "knock." Dr. Newton said. A second engine may be installed in the new buildings, and foundations for the two are being supplied.

Tests are being made to show whether the gasoline will allow the engine to start readily, accelerate quickly, and run without fuel waste or oil dilution, he said. Other tests control safety in transportation and handling, freedom from vapor lock in operation, and absence of corrosive constituent and of gummy material that might clog the carburetor and valves.

Work on the 18 by 40 ft. building has now commenced. It is to be on the north side of the campus.

CROWBAR-SKULL AT MEDICAL MUSEUM

Medical Society Member's Head

Graces Exhibit Shelf

Almost 100 years ago on a small farm in Vermont, a charge of dynamite and a crowbar combined to produce one of the "most respected members of Harvard's Medical Society." Unfortunately all that remains of this amazing member is his naked skull, resting in prominence at the Warrenton Anatomical Museum of the Medical School.

The owner of the punctured skull, one Phineas P. Gage, according to Myrtelle May Canavan, Curator of the Museum, led a most extraordinary and amazing existence. While tapping some explosives into a crevice back in 1848, Phineas accidentally set the dynamite off and a 13 pound crowbar was driven clean through his skull from jaw bone to the back of his head.

Phineas was a rugged soul, and although he lost the sight of his right eye and was laid up for several months, in two years he was the principle attraction in a side show that toured the country. He even carried the crowbar along with him to prove the authenticity of his curious tale.

Now Resides at Museum

In 1852 he left the side show and arrived in Chile to drive a six or eight stage horse carriage, but soon sickened and in 1861 at the age of 38 died in California. Through the efforts of his attending physician, Dr. John M. Harlow, the skull came to rest in an exhibit case at the Harvard Museum. Only regret among Museum officials is that they don't have the crowbar.

This oddity is not the only attraction for Medical students within the Museum. Among other interesting items are the original ether inhaler, casts of surgeon's hands, collections of acromegalic skulls, 600 prehistoric Peruvian skulls, and plaster heads of many criminals.

The conglomeration of bones and oddities is significant not only for the medical relics, but also as a place of study for future medics. The collection has been built up by alumni of the Medical School who have added their own collections.
